SENATE VOTES

- Land Conservation Funding. Pro-environment vote: No. H-200, the state budget, cut land conservation funds by 85% and prevented the Clean Water Fund from acquiring land. The bill became law despite the governor's veto.
- Promote Drilling and Fracking. Pro-environment vote: No. S-709 called for drilling off the state's coast and set the stage for drilling onshore using "fracking." The bill passed and was vetoed.
- Veto Override of Onshore and Offshore Drilling. Pro-environment vote: No. S-709 was vetoed, but overridden by the Senate 31-17. The House did not override the veto.
- Overtake River Protection. Pro-environment vote: No. H-62 overturned special protections for Boylston Creek, a pristine trout stream in Western North Carolina. The bill passed and became law without the governor's signature.
- Damage Beaches. Pro-environment vote: No. S-110 allowed terminal groins, which science shows damages ecology and increases erosion, on the state's beaches. The bill passed and became law without the governor's signature.
- Protect Jordan Lake. Pro-environment vote: Yes. Sen. Stein's amendment to H-119 allowed Jordan Lake restoration rules to stay in tact without weakening changes. The amendment failed.
- Weaken Environmental Laws. Pro-environment vote: No. H-119 weakened buffer rules around the Tar-Pam and Neuse Rivers, delayed part of the Jordan Lake restoration rules, and weakened toxic clean-up rules. The bill passed both chambers and became law without the Governor's signature.
- Promote Fracking. Pro-environment vote: No. Sen. Rucho's amendment to H-242 promoted a risky form of gas drilling called "fracking." The amendment passed.
- Weaken Toxic Cleanup Standards. Pro-environment vote: No. S-181 weakened clean-up standards for leaking underground petroleum storage tanks and required polluters to pay less to clean up their leaks. The bill passed the Senate.
- Rollback Environmental Safeguards. Pro-environment vote: No. S-781 prohibited state agencies from adopting environmental rules more stringent than federal rules and initiated the repeal of existing clean air and water rules. The bill became law despite the governor's veto.

HOUSE VOTES (ON REVERSE)

- Land Conservation Funding. Pro-environment vote: No. H-200, the state budget, cut land conservation funds by 85% and prevented the Clean Water Fund from acquiring land. The bill became law despite the governor's veto.
- Promote Offshore Wind. Pro-environment vote: Yes. Rep. Harrison's amendment to S-709 required the promotion of offshore wind and other clean energy sources in addition to oil and gas drilling. The amendment failed.
- Balance Energy Council. Pro-environment vote: Yes. Rep. Luebke's amendment to S-709 added representatives of clean energy and environmental interests to the bill's energy council to counter representatives of dirty energy sources. The amendment failed.
- Promote Drilling and Fracking. Pro-environment vote: No. S-709 called for drilling off the state's coast and set the stage for drilling onshore using "fracking." The bill passed and was vetoed. The Senate overrode the governor's veto.
- Prevent High-Speed Rail Money in NC. Pro-environment vote: No. H-422 stalled high-speed rail development by requiring the Department of Transportation to get the General Assembly's approval before spending funds related to high-speed rail. The bill passed the House.
- Overtake River Protection. Pro-environment vote: No. H-62 overturned special protections for Boylston Creek, a pristine trout stream in Western North Carolina. The bill passed and became law without the governor's signature.
- Damage Beaches. Pro-environment vote: No. S-110 allowed terminal groins, which science shows damages ecology and increase erosion, on the state's beaches. The bill passed and became law without the governor's signature.
- Rollback Environmental Safeguards. Pro-environment vote: No. S-781 prohibited state agencies from adopting environmental rules more stringent than federal rules and initiated the repeal of existing clean air and water rules. The bill became law despite the governor's veto.
- Veto Override of Rollback of Environmental Safeguards. Pro-environment vote: No. S-781 was vetoed, but the House and Senate overrode the veto and the bill became law.
- Weaken Environmental Laws. Pro-environment vote: No. H-119 weakened buffer rules around the Tar-Pam and Neuse Rivers, delayed part of the Jordan Lake cleanup rules, and weakened toxic clean-up rules. The bill passed and became law without the governor's signature.
